The City Clerk made a very careful report of moneys collected and showed how it was appropriated to different funds but the Council declined to have the same printed. The cost of printing would probably have been about $5.00.

Madame Piotrowska, president of the Associated Charities, accompanied by Miss Curraleson Smith, Mrs. G. W. Evans, Mrs. R. J. McKee and Mrs. T. T. Covington, appeared before the Council and asked for an appropriation to enable them to carry on the charitable work of the city. The Council donated them $50. Madame Piotrowska presented the needs of the organization in a few well chosen words and clear-cut statements.

TERRELL URGES
USE STATE AIDCOMMISSIONER OF ROADS HAS WRITTEN TO COUNTY JUDGES THAT HAVE NOT APPLIED.

37 COUNTIES HAVE APPLIED

Five Cent Tax on Entire State Will Pay Into the State Road Fund
Whether Counties Act or Not.

(Special Frankfort Correspondence.)

Frankfort.—Commissioner of Roads R. C. Terrell has written to the county judges which have not applied for state aid under the act of 1914, urging them to do so and enclosing blank forms for the resolution of the fiscal court requesting aid. His letter follows:

"You will note from the enclosed list that thirty-seven counties have thus far applied for state aid and that your county is not among the list. There remains but a trifle over a month of time in which the department will receive applications for state aid from the counties, it being necessary to fix a date so that an apportionment can be made and work begun on the roads in order to give the counties an idea of the amount of money that they will receive from the state. The date has been fixed for March 4, 1915, after midnight of which date no applications will be received.

"You are aware that a five-cent tax on the whole state, and your county as well as Jefferson county, will pay into the state road fund regardless of whether you make application or not. Jefferson county will pay one-fifth of the total state tax, or $120,000 of the $600,000, the approximate state road fund. No county can get back more than two per cent; hence, Jefferson county would receive only $12,000, or approximately that amount, and the other money as well as that from other counties that pay a large percentage of the tax, will be available for the poor counties in excess of the amount they pay in.

"I call your attention to this fact and to the fact that you are missing an opportunity to receive from the state assistance in road building, which will not be kept open longer than the date mentioned, and in case you will fail to apply, the money does not accumulate to the credit of your county, but goes to the counties that do apply. Your prompt action in this matter will be to the benefit of your county as a body applying for state aid is advisable. If you have any reasons for not applying, or if there are any questions you wish to ask, please state them without any hesitancy, as I will be glad to correspond with you and give you any information possible concerning the state aid law. I would urge that you read chapters 86 and 87 of the acts of 1914 and make your application in compliance with Section 7 of Chapter 87 on the blank herewith furnished."

Sentences May Be Upset.

Hundreds of sentences imposed by judges all over the state, under the provisions of the indeterminate sentence law, are likely to be upset because of a misprint of one word in the copies of the statute which have been in the hands of circuit judges for nearly a year. This situation was brought to the attention of the new Paris pike judges by Atty. Gen. James Garnett. The latter said that part of the printed copies of the indeterminate sentence law which provides for the fixing of the punishment by jury and all copies should conform. The act became a law March 17 last, and since that time hundreds of sentences have been passed after the punishment had been fixed by the judge.

Win Liquor Case on Appeal.

Hirsch Bros. & Co., of Louisville, won their case on appeal of the Commonwealth from judgment of the Mercer circuit court dismissing an indictment against the company charging it with delivering intoxicating liquors at Louisville for shipment to Harrodsburg, the allegation being that the package "did not contain the name and address of consignee nor state that such liquor was for the personal and family use of consignees." The court held that the transaction was consummated in Jefferson county and the railroad was receiving agent for the consignee.

McCreary Appointments.

Gov. McCreary appointed Add Tarter, of Oakland, Hickman county, and Mrs. Ellen Owsley, of Lancaster, members of the committee of mercy which will meet here to organize in this state. The governor also appointed C. B. Ross, of Louisville, special policeman for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. in Kentucky.

To Select Chairman.

The tobacco growers of Franklin county met here and appointed a committee composed of John C. Noel, B. B. Graves and O. B. Smithers to name a permanent chairman of the organization and report at a meeting to be held in this city March 1. At that meeting delegates to the meeting to be held in Lexington March 2 will be selected.

Fire Damages Moving Picture Theater.

Fire that was discovered shortly after midnight in the Columbia Moving Picture Theater, on Main street, did damage to it and the Hume building, in which it is located, to the amount of $6,000. The Frankfort hotel, which adjoins the theater, was also damaged to some extent.

Old Washington Portrait Revived.

The old portrait of George Washington, which is being restored for the Kentucky Historical society by Pasquale Farina, of Philadelphia, will be received this week, and the artist himself will come along to attend to the framing. It is expected that the portrait will be restored to look exactly as it did a hundred years ago, when it was painted for the state. It will be unveiled February 22, Washington's birthday. South Trimble, clerk of the house of representatives at Washington, has sent a magnificent flag.

German Notice Ignored by Dutch Vessels—Liners From New York to Europe Will Continue to Sail.

Washington, Feb. 8.—Following the new "Berlin Decree" a rumor was prevalent here last night that the Germans had torpedoed the former Cunarder Campana in the English channel. The Campana was said to have been acting as a troop ship from England to France. At the navy department Secretary Daniels said he had no word of any kind in reference to the Campana.

London, Feb. 8.—While the German threat of a blockade has created a great wave of indignation among newspapers and the public, it is regarded by some high officials as a bluff.

It is contended that with the small number of war vessels at the disposal of Germany it will be impossible to make the blockade effective.

The argument is that if Germany had been able to interfere with British transports carrying troops to France she already would have done so.

Plans Counter Stroke.

Nevertheless, a statement issued by the foreign office indicates the British contemplate a counter stroke.

The authorities are considering, says the statement, "more stringent measures against German trade."

So far as shippers are concerned little alarm appears to be felt.

Dutch Ignoring Warning.

The Hague, Feb. 8.—In shipping circles it is declared that the German notice will have only the slightest effect on Dutch vessels, most of which are expected to continue their voyages, according to schedule.

New Yorkers Not Scared.

New York, Feb. 8.—That the German admiralty communication declaring the waters around Great Britain and Ireland, including the entire English channel, a war zone after February 18 would have no effect on the movements of steamships between New York and British and French ports was the general opinion expressed by representatives of shipping companies.

Police to Serve Soup.

Detroit, Feb. 8.—Forty Detroit citizens have pledged an aggregate of $1,000 a month for the support of a soup kitchen for the unemployed. The police will operate the kitchen.

Friction With Carranza Government

Liable to Lead to the Most Serious Difficulty.

Washington, Feb. 8.—Administration officials and the diplomatic representatives of foreign governments here were keenly watching for developments in the acute situation at Mexico City, where many members of the diplomatic corps threatens to quit because of serious friction with the Carranza government.

The advisability of united action for the withdrawal of all foreign legations in the Mexican capital because of the difficulty of code communication and the alleged slight respect shown them by the Carranza authorities already has been suggested to their home departments by diplomats of some leading European nations.

This would leave the interests of foreign countries in Mexico in charge of consular officers, thereby virtually severing diplomatic relations with the southern republic.

Peace Convention Begins.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 8.—More than one hundred delegates are here for the Mexican peace conference which opened Saturday. Following this convention delegates will be sent to Mexico to ask the war leaders to attend in person a second conference, according to Miguel Bolanos Cacho, who was selected temporary chairman of the convention.

He was uninjured, and when taken in an automobile to the nearest town was able to alight from the machine without assistance.

TO STOP GAMBLING IN GRAIN.

Washington.—President Wilson received a telegram from John J. Dillon, Commissioner of Foods and Markets, of New York, asking that he recommend to Congress the enactment of a law prohibiting "gambling" in wheat and other food products. Speculation in future deliveries of grain, Mr. Dillon said, had caused recent increases in the price of flour, which would soon result in the price of bread being raised. The Department of Justice is looking into the case.

THE DANGER SIGNAL.

We take no part in the quarrel between Senators James and Camden other than to deplore its occurrence. Personality should never have been injected into a question fraught with so much interest to the Democratic party. The subject matter should receive the most dispassionate, kindly and dignified discussion. Nothing is gained by the bombastic, explosive speeches made by Senators Stone and James. The Democratic party is on trial and its deliberations should be signally calm. We do not believe that he is, but if Senator Camden is actuated by ulterior motives, the people will find it out in due season. It does not belong to his fellow-Senator to administer chastisement. The so-called exhortations of Senator James will rebound against him. All the wisdom is not lodged in his cranium.

The question of purchasing ships by the government is not a democratic doctrine. It is expressly contrary to the fundamental party law as expressed in all the Democratic platforms for the last twenty-five years. The Democratic party at large has had no opportunity to go on record and express either their approval or disapproval of the same. They have, for time out of memory, positively declared against ship subsidy. The ship purchase bill is not only a ship subsidy in its rarest sense, but it exceeds it, and to our mind is one of the most dangerous declarations yet put forward by any President. In short, it is nothing more than the ownership of public utilities and a centralized government, directed from Washington. The Democratic party has fought the idea of centralization from the very infancy of the party to the present time. Yet, despite all of the history of the Democratic party, the President, who stands as its leader, foists upon Congress this dangerous bill and demands its passage. He has thrown the whole power of his administration behind it and his administration takes the chance of scuttling the Democratic ship of state on the rock of "ship purchase."

Personally, we are violently opposed to it and we believe that every democrat who loves the party principles and who takes pleasure in the party history, will likewise disapprove the measure.

It is urged that it is absolutely necessary to own and control ships in order to correct exorbitant ocean freight rates. The argument is without the vestige of truth. There is not a ship that can touch the shores of the United States except by the consent of the United States. Before any ship loads its cargo and departs from our shores, it can be required to execute a contract that is both reasonable and just to ship owner and to shippers. Congress has the exclusive right to determine what rates are right and proper and to exclude from the ocean carrying trade all ships that refuse to accept its decrees. They are nothing but common carriers, subject to the regulation of Congress, like the railroads and other common carriers of the interior.

The cry of "excessive freight rates," and "we are against the ship building trust," are but bogies brought into existence to give seeming foundation for the passage of the ship purchase bill.

It remains to be seen whether the President and the Democratic Senators and Congressmen who blindly follow his lead, will see the danger signal erected by the eight bolting Democrats in the Senate. Those who blindly follow the President, because he is president, and not because he is right, are his worst enemies.

In ignoring the party platform, the President has set an example of insubordination and he can not complain that others exercise their sovereign right and delegated duty in voting against his pet measure.

THE PAN-AMERICAN BANK.

Hon. Harvey Helm introduced in the House of Representatives in Congress a bill, the object of which is to incorporate the Pan-American Bank to be located at Ancon, in the Canal Zone, with power to establish branch offices elsewhere. The bill provides that the United States government shall subscribe to the capital stock and fixes the capital stock at $25,000,000, divided into shares of $100 each and fixes the number of 130,000 shares as the part to be taken by the Federal Government. The act provides that the said bank, with the consent of the Federal Reserve Board, may make loans on real estate located in any country to the extent of 25 per cent of the capital stock set aside for the business in branch banks.

Without hesitation we pronounce ourselves as unalterably and violently opposed to the measure. The general government has no business to embark in the banking business any more than it has in any other private business. Means have already been devised by which the money of the people can be hoarded and placed under the control of one concentrated bank directory which would enable a vicious board to entirely dominate and control the money of the United States. The object of the Federal Reserve Board and the banking act was to prevent panics, but it must be borne in mind that all the national banks of the country and many of the state banks are under the control of this Federal Reserve Board, and it also must be borne in mind that it could be made one of the greatest political engines ever devised, and that it could, if so desired, bring about the greatest financial crisis imaginable.

The people have almost lost sight of the fact that the savings banks established by the Federal government throughout the country, operated by the postoffice, have withdrawn from circulation many millions of dollars. The tendency of the times seems to be to give the Federal government complete control of the finances of the country, and when this end is accomplished the smaller business man will be swallowed up by the larger financial concerns of the country. Instead of the financial policies being in aid of the people, it appears to us that it is producing great concentration and is bringing about a centralized financial government directed from Washington.

This bill should have a speedy death.

DEATHS

Mr. William Van Fleet, a highly respected citizen of the Berea vicinity, died last Sunday of diabetes. He was eighty-five years old and for many years a member of the Baptist church. He was noted for his genial and kind disposition and splendid Christian character. He is survived by his wife, two daughters and three sons.

Mr. William Barnes, of Newby, died very suddenly at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Vanarsdale, Wednesday night, of heart failure. The funeral was held at 12 o'clock Friday, the interment taking place in the family burying-ground near Newby. He is survived by one daughter, who has the deepest sympathy of many friends.

Miss Eva Dunbar died at her home in Winchester, January 22, of dropsy of the heart. Deceased was born May 1, 1870, and was a devoted member of the Christian church. Several weeks ago she underwent an operation in Richmond, shortly after which she was removed to Winchester, where she lingered until death relieved her suffering. Besides a host of friends she leaves a mother, four sisters and two brothers to mourn her loss, all of whom have the deepest sympathy of everyone. The remains were interred in the Berea cemetery.

Rev. James Parsons, a faithful servant in the Master's work, died February 1, at 5 o'clock p. m. Rev. Parsons was born in Lee county, Virginia, and moved with his parents to this State when he was quite small. For twenty-six years he preached the gospel in the mountains of this and adjacent counties. For six years he was pastor of the Pilot Knob Baptist church and nearby churches. He was a great sufferer from tuberculosis. Even with all the bodily pains that was his to endure, he died a happy and victorious death. He leaves a wife and several children. The funeral was held in the Berea Baptist church at 2 o'clock p. m., Wednesday, under the direction of Rev. Hudson, assisted by Revs. McMurray, Roberts, Lambert and Brown, after which the Masonic and Eastern Star lodges took charge of the body, which was laid to rest in the Berea cemetery.

James Donald, the one-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Strother Goff, of Berea, died of bronchial trouble Monday, the 25th ult. The funeral was conducted Tuesday morning by Rev. D. W. Brown, of the Methodist church, at the home of the parents. The parents have the deepest sympathy of numerous friends.

Morgan Morton, telegraph operator at Ford, died of typhoid pneumonia Sunday afternoon at his home at that place. His remains were taken to Winchester Monday, where they were laid to rest. Mr. Morton was about 18 years of age and leaves many friends, who grieve over his early death.

On Saturday night, Feb. 6th, the spirit of Miss Dolly Cruse took its flight to realms beyond. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cruse, of Moberly, and was 17 years of age. About three years ago she gave her heart to Christ and had since been a shining light in the Master's service. Her's was a living, triumphant faith, and her daily life a series of christian victories. In her home, her church and her community she was a bright witness to her Savior's love. Besides her parents, she leaves several brothers and sisters, and the sympathy of many friends is extended to the family in their bereavement. The burial took place Monday in Richmond cemetery. Bright and sunny, she was ever a favorite, but it was for the beautiful christian influence she shed that she will be longest remembered by those who knew and loved her.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep!
From which nether e'er wake to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by no pain, no woes!"

How many times within the past month have we been sadly reminded of the lines—"He repeth the boarded grain at a breath, and the flowers that grow between;" and so once again the "grim reaper" has come to our midst and cut down a young life in the morning of existence.

Just one week ago Friday, Miss Mary Tudor left school on the Hill, going home in perfect health and strength. She was stricken with pneumonia and died Saturday at noon. She was only 16 years of age and was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Shelby Tudor, of Berea. The funeral was held on Monday morning, the services being conducted by Rev. Pell, after which the burial took place in Richmond cemetery.

To the stricken mother and father the sorrowful sympathy of many friends is tendered.

Good ready-to-wear is to be had at the Closing Out Sale of J. R. Gibson & Co. 21

Death of Mrs. Giunchigliani.

A death which has caused universal sorrow in this community was that of Mrs. Giunchigliani, which occurred in Lexington Saturday, following an illness of many months. She had only been from home about ten days when the message came announcing the sad tidings of her death. Mrs. Giunchigliani was a lovely woman of fine christian character. A devoted mother and wife and had many warm friends during her sojourn in Richmond. She was of a modest and retiring disposition and lived out her life in the care of her home and children.

She was a devout member of the Catholic church and her funeral was held at that church Monday morning, conducted by Father O'Bryan, thence the interment in the Richmond cemetery, where the grave was covered with beautiful flowers, sent by loving friends.

To the husband and children the deepest sympathy is extended.

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Copy for change of advertisement must be in this office before noon Friday to insure change in the current issue. If received after that time it will be at our option. This paper is printed in two sections which makes the above rule imperatively necessary.

Paid In Advance.

We intend to place our paper on a strictly "paid-in-advance" basis. In these hard times, we do not want to appear unreasonable and when we tell you the facts, we think you will find us right in our conclusion.

1st. Everything we buy must be paid for in cash or in 30 days, which is the same as cash.

2nd. It takes a large amount of money to run this business one month.

3rd. Everything in our line has advanced in price fully 50 per cent, so that at the price of $1.00 per year, we lose money on a subscription. Therefore, the loss of a subscription is more than a dollar thrown away.

4th. The law does not permit us to carry non-paying subscribers indefinitely.

5th. To mail out notices costs about 4 cents the letter. Not over three or four persons out of a hundred pay any attention to our request for payment.

6th. Finally, in order to collect some of our best accounts, we must place them in the hands of a professional collector, which costs us about 25 cents on the dollar.

7th. The loss of subscriptions and the cost of collections make a subscription net us less than 50 cents, bringing on our shoulders a loss of over 50 cents for each subscriber.

8th. We are willing to accommodate the public, but we refuse emphatically to longer stand for this loss.

9th. Subscriptions to this paper must be paid in advance.

Bring your mules to Bob Walker's stable Saturday, February 13.

Coming.

Prof. T. J. Coates, superintendent of rural schools, is delivering a series of lectures on rural school problems at the Western State Normal and revising the course of study to conform to the present State adoption of text books. He will deliver the same series of lectures at the Eastern State Normal. His lectures are delivered to the entire school.

It might be a good scheme for every couple to get married on the 15th of the month. Then they would have something to blame it on in later years. When a man goes shopping with his wife he is either henpecked or in love with her.

Every clerk knows that if the boss made the office force undergo an efficiency examination the clerk would run first and the manager last. Poultry Prize Winners

Mrs. John K. Gibson attended the Indiana State Poultry Show at Indianapolis last week. She captured 2nd and 3d prizes in large and closely contested classes on her Brown Leghorns. It is notable that her $25 hen has never been beaten. On her Brown Leghorn cockerel she took 4th prize, he being a little off color for a perfect specimen. While there Mrs. Gibson was the guest of Mrs. D. B. Carter, who before her marriage was Miss Ellen Mershon, of this city.

HOW FRENCH PEOPLE CURE STOMACH TROUBLE

A household remedy of the French peasantry, consisting of pure vegetable oil, and said to possess wonderful merit in the treatment of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles, has been introduced in this country by George H. Mayr, who for twenty years has been one of the leading down-town druggists of Chicago and who himself was cured by its use. So quick and effective is its action that a single dose is usually enough to produce pronounced relief in the most stubborn cases, has been tried by those who have tried it declare they never heard of anything to produce such remarkable results in so short a time. It is known as Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and can now be had at all leading drug stores. It is sold with the positive understanding that your money will be refunded without question or quibble if ONE bottle fails to give you absolute satisfaction.

To the Tobacco Growers All Over the County:

Some partial friends of the old Madison Tobacco Warehouse Company, intimate that the high prices she has been quoting cover a period of several years. This is a mistake for she don't have to do that even in this bad year. She has gotten the prices she quoted, but she can't help it if the other fellow can't get as much, for it isn't his fault, he would if he could and then proceed to tell you about it. But he hasn't told you—just wait till he does.

Well we are going to tell you about some right fresh sales, within a week; how about that. We know it hurts to tell the truth but we are going to do it. So look at these and let's see what the other fellow has to say. In doing this we are going to give you a "line on the market" right now that is at the Madison House. Don't know anything about the others. We will start as follows:

John L. Eads, crop lot only, 400 pounds	$22.00
Luther Gibbs, Garrard county, 3175 pounds	19.00
1 basket bringing $50 the hundred	50.00
B. C. Wearren, Hackley, Garrard county, 2550 pounds	18.00
1 basket bringing $50 the hundred	50.00
Donohue Bros., Lancaster, 3035 pounds	16.50
R. A. Tudor, Madison county, 2220 pounds	16.00
W. C. Ross, Madison county, 1570 pounds	16.00
Forrest Stapp, Lancaster, 8970 pounds	16.00
James Burnside, Lancaster, 3150 pounds	15.00
Curtis & Shrewsbury, 14,520 pounds	12.00

What do you think of this last lot? They are fresh, very fresh, and we couldn't prevent these farmers getting so much for their crops. We wish they had averaged $44 a hundred. Now this is the market or the best of it as seen at the Madison House. A "direct line" on the market for some of these crops were sold yesterday, all in the last few days. We wish that we could tell you that we had a floor average of 39c but we can't do that. But we can tell you that we are still at the old stand getting every dollar for your tobacco that any other house can.

Very sincerely,

MADISON TOBACCO WAREHOUSE COMPANY, Inc.

Methodist Church—Subjects for Sunday,
 Feb. 14, morning, at 10:45, "The Better Country"; evening, at 7 o'clock,
 "Discipleship Illustrated." B. C. Horton, Pastor.

A large congregation heard Rev. Reynolds
 Sunday morning at the Baptist church.
 It was a powerful sermon on "Wonder of Divine Grace." All who have heard Rev. Reynolds speak in high praise of him, for he preaches nothing but the gospel.

A beautiful feature of the Sunday morning last services at the First Christian church was the splendid solo by Mr. Julian Tyng. He has a fine, rich voice and his singing the Sunday before was, as well as on this occasion, was a source of great pleasure to those who heard him. Added to this, a strong sermon by Dr. Barnes made the day a memorable one.

Rev. J. N. Culson, of this city, preached at the Methodist church in Irvine on Sunday morning and evening.

The Union services held by the churches of this place at the First Christian church was well attended by a representative audience. Rev. E. B. Barnes presided. Mr. L. P. Evans, Dr. J. G.
 Crabbe, Dr. E. C. McDougle made addresses of welcome to the new minister of the Baptist church, Rev. J. R. Reynolds, who very feelingly responded to the same.
 Rev. Reynolds and his family have received a kindly and cordial welcome to this city.

JAMES D. BLACK IS CANDIDATE FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNORSHIP

James D. Black, of Barbourville, Knox County, has issued the following statement announcing his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor in the Primary Election, August 7, 1915.

Democrats of Kentucky: Recognizing, in the fullest sense, your right to choose at the Primary Election to be held in August, 1915, those whom you prefer to be the candidates of the party to be voted for at the general election in next November, I am a candidate, subject to your will to be expressed at said Primary Election, for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic ticket. I am induced, in a measure, to make this announcement by a desire of my own to serve the people of our splendid State in the capacity of Lieutenant Governor, and also, in a measure, by suggestions of a few individuals whose personal and political friendship is real and in whose judgment I have and ought to have confidence. My past fealty to the Democratic party may be accepted by you, I confidently trust, as a sufficient guaranty that I shall, whether nominated or not, give to the ticket you may name and the principles for which our party stands, very faithful support, for that course has been my habit at all times since reaching legal age. If nominated and elected Lieutenant Governor, I promise you and the people of Kentucky to bring to the discharge of the duties of the office the very best service of which I may be capable. Whether or not I am equipped to properly discharge those duties, it is not for me to say. I submit that to your judgment and decision. I believe in a just and wise economy in public as well as in private business, and cordially agree that no one should be entrusted with responsible office who is not able and willing to perform his whole duty to the public whose interests he asks to be commissioned to serve. I believe those on whom the Constitution places the duty and responsibility of legislation for the people of the State ought to industriously employ the time the General Assembly may be in session, to needed legislation, complete that as quickly as a proper regard for the best interests of the State will permit, and then adjourn, diligently avoiding every unnecessary expense to the people. I have no doubt that those who have to do in an official way with the money of the community, or charged with the administration of public affairs, ought to act in relation to such, according to that high standard which the most prudent, careful, just and intelligent exercise in the conduct of their private business. If elected Lieutenant Governor, that standard shall be my guide in the labor the law assigns to me. In submitting my candidacy, I invite the scrutiny of the people of Kentucky as to my fitness for the preferment thus sought.

Very respectfully,

JAMES D. BLACK.

Barbourville, Ky., December 28, 1914.

WHEN THE TIRED MOTHER GIVES OUT

What Then?—The Family Suffers, the Poor Mothers Suffer—Mrs. Becker Meets This Distressing Situation.

Collinsville, Ill.—"I suffered from a nervous break-down and terrible headaches, and was tired all over, totally worn out and too discouraged to enjoy life, but as I had four in family and sometimes eight or nine boarders, I kept on working despite my suffering. I saw Vinol advertised and decided to try it, and within two weeks I noticed a decided improvement in my condition and now I am a well woman."

—Mrs. ANA BECKER, Collinsville, Ill. There are hundreds of nervous, run-down, overworked women in this vicinity who are hardly able to drag around and who are sure would be wonderfully benefited by Vinol as Mrs. Becker was.

The reason Vinol is so successful in building up health and strength in such cases is because it combines the medicinal tissue building and curative elements of cod's livers together with the blood making, strengthening properties of tonic iron. We ask every weak, nervous, run-down man or woman in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol on our guarantee to return their money if it fails to benefit.

Winter Doubles Work.

In summer the work of eliminating poisons and acids from the blood is helped by perspiration. In cold weather, with little outdoor work or exercise to cause sweating, the kidneys have to do double work. Foley Kidney Pills help overworked, weak and diseased kidneys to filter and cast out of the blood the waste matter that causes pain in side or back, rheumatism, lumbago, stiffness of joints, sore muscles and other ills resulting from improper elimination. THIRD EPISODE. June Finds Work.

CHAPTER I.

DOWN the dark boulevard from Brynport weaved and bumped and rattled a lone taxicab, with a high powered limousine steadily gaining on it. A black Vandyked man in the limousine began to toss something out of the window as he passed the taxi at breakneck speed. He smiled as he heard a loud report like the explosion of a revolver, then another. He knocked on the driver's window, and as the car came to a stop he looked behind. The taxi had drawn up. He hastily replaced under the seat the hamper in which he had broken to bits all its porcelain and glassware. A tall, gaunt girl, distinctly a maid, was out, impatiently surveying the flat tires of the taxi, when the limousine, its bright dome light suddenly flashing up, backed alongside. The black Vandyked man stepped down.

"Perhaps I can offer your passengers the use of my machine," he suggested. That relieved young woman opened the door of the taxi and poked her head inside.

"There ain't anything else we can do, Miss June," she whispered. "I suppose not," came a sweet voice from the taxi, and the face of a beautiful young girl appeared in the window. She started as she saw the black Vandyked man, Gilbert Blye! He stood hat doffed, politely waiting their acceptance.

"Perhaps I can offer the use of my machine."

"Oh, better go, miss," husked the taxi driver. "This old tub'll be here tomorrow morning." June Warner slowly stepped down. "Thank you," she managed to murmur. "I beg of you not to mention it. The favor is to me," Blye gallantly returned, while the maid began to transfer from the taxi to the other car arm load after arm load of unpacked clothing.

Around the curve behind them there dashed another limousine and a runabout in time for the occupants to see Gilbert Blye assisting June into the luxurious limousine. They also saw the eight cylinder machine leap forward. Blye, unconscious that they were being pursued, as was the girl, thought that he heard a shout as they gathered speed, and he looked back in time to see first the runabout and then the limousine swerve and slow down and to hear two loud bangs. He grinned. His driver grinned. The taxi driver grinned. Then they whizzed away. "Why, you are the little runaway bride, the girl in the watch!" said Blye, leaning forward.

"Yes," and June blushed.

She felt the black eyes of Gilbert Blye fixed upon her. Could it be possible that he had followed her? Oh, no! Still, he had her address in her watch and her portrait.

"You were kind enough on the train, Mr. Blye, to offer to let me buy my watch, and I'll take it now, if you please."

"I'm very sorry I haven't it with me. But I shall see you another time, I am sure." He came back from the forward seat and sat with her.

Back near the abandoned taxi there was a frantic group. Ned Warner, his face as set as if it had been chiseled from marble, stood in the center of the road with his fists clinched until his nails dug into his palms. There could be no doubt now that Gilbert Blye's pursuit of Ned's wife, June, was deliberate and purposeful.

June's father strode slowly up and down, his lips compressed and his brows black. He passed Ned half a dozen times, but they did not exchange a word.

Bobbie Bletcher and the driver of the Moore limousine had sprung out to repair their respective tires, but Iris Bletcher, who had indulged in a few violent sobs as a preliminary to further action, suddenly discovered the economic waste. "Here, Robbie," she called, "get back and help Jerry and let our car go. There's room for all of us in the limousine."

Up came Mrs. Blye's auto. "You're to jump in with Mrs. Blye, Ned, and go straight on!" Iris shouted. "Get right in! Don't waste a minute!" And she fairly shoved the grim young husband of June Warner into the seat by the side of the determined wife of the man with the black Vandyke. The electric rolled away at its utmost speed.

At Blye's club the limousine stopped, while the black Vandyked man alighted. June smiled as she bade him good night, but she was very thoughtful nevertheless and troubled. Blye stood on the steps of the club and gazed after the receding car with a smile of satisfaction.

The limousine sped on to the address which Blye had given the driver. June studied the house earnestly. It was a smart looking building. The windows were brilliantly lighted, and in the parlor were three young ladies in rather striking evening dress. June gave the driver the address of a modest hotel.

Halfway to their destination June changed her mind. The modest hotel, she remembered, had a blazing lobby, and there was no way to pass in or out without being stared at. She gave the driver another address. Marie saw Ned's panic in her face. She found the little hands of June cold with nervous collapse.

"East," she snapped to the driver. "I don't know the number. I'll tell you when we get there." A few minutes later they stopped in front of a dingy looking building with no light in the vestibule. Marie jumped out and rang the doorbell. A woman came to the door. They exchanged a few brief words, and Marie ran down to the limousine.

"It's all right, June. Mrs. Boales has a nice back room for you and a cot for me."

June stepped from the car with a sigh of relief. A home of any sort was welcome now. It had been a long and exciting day.

"I know the room, Miss June," said Marie, sweeping past with her arms full of fuffles.

Blye was in front of his club with a gray mustached, jovial looking, pink faced man when the car returned.

"Where did you take her, Scatt?" Blye asked.

"She wouldn't stop at Mother Russell's," began Scatt confidentially. "She—"

"I know that," interrupted the gray mustached man, Orin Cunningham.

"There was no number on the house, boss, but I can find it."

"Drive us there," directed Blye. Down on the dingy east side street he tried earnestly to pin down Scatt's dazed memory. Up and down Blye moved, seeking in every window for some sign of the runaway bride. Suddenly his eye caught the glint of something in a vestibule. He ran up the steps. The glittering object was a buckle on a dainty little slipper, one which June's collier had carried down to the taxi for her when she had stolen her clothes and Marie from her father's house. He jotted the number of the house in a memorandum book.

CHAPTER II.

JUST where the narrow lane of the interminable Mott street construction work the Moore limousine overtook Honoria Blye's electric. Mrs. Blye let Ned alight. She drove home. Her husband had long since returned to his room. From a secret drawer of his desk he took some papers and stuffed them in his pocket; then he called the abnormally ugly Blye maid to help him with a trunk.

CHAPTER III.

JUNE bustled quite cheerfully about her toilet the next morning and chose a little dark gray suit as being the least conspicuous, for now she was to be a working girl.

Suddenly there was a wheezing and a rustling at the door and a scurrying as if someone were bending to listen at the keyhole, a silence and then a knock. It was Mrs. Boales.

"There's a young lady to see you, Miss—"

"Justin," snapped Marie, who had given that name by a brilliant flash of intellect.

"Yes, Mary," wheezed Mrs. Boales. "That wasn't the name the young lady gave. First she said Moore, and then she said Warner, and then she said that Justin was right, she guessed, but she said 'June' every time, and she brought this slipper. Is it yours?"

"Who is the young lady?" asked June.

"Miss Thomas, Miss—ma'am." Mrs. Boales constantly roving eye came to rest on the slipper and the plain gold band on June's finger. "She said she came to see you about a position."

June cast down her eyes in troubled thought. Blye—he had said he would send some one for her in the morning. Was there no evading the man's kindness? How had he—Aburd! Of course he had got her address from the driver of the car. She went down the stairs in worried concern, but in the doorway of the parlor she stopped in astonishment as she saw her caller. For a moment the two beautiful young women stood studying each other in admiration: then the brunette sweet-forward with a gracious smile. Later June called up the stairs, "I'll be back some time this afternoon, Marie." Then June went out with Tommy Thomas!

Honoria Blye, sitting at her parlor window and exchanging the thoughts of the morning with her maid, fastened familiarly, saw looking across from her house a long, lean, lanky man with a sparse black beard. Presently the doorbell rang, and one of the wide, low detectives came in with an air of great exhaustion.

"Nothing doing, ma'am," he reported. "Blinky Peters and I watched your husband's club all the time. Sneaky Tavis has shadowed Warner's apartments, and I'm to go to let him get some sleep."

"Are you sure my husband and that girl haven't left the city?" she asked. "They didn't go from any regular railroad station," stated Bill Wolf, with conviction.

Ned Warner at about the same time received a report of similar discouragement from the long, lean, lanky detective. There had been found no trace of June Warner nor of Blye.

Without thought of detectives, but keeping a watchful eye lest she should see Ned or her parents, June went boldly forth. She was thoughtful as Tommy Thomas ushered her into a waiting hansom, for this friend of Gilbert Blye's was expensively dressed and seemed to live in unusual surroundings.

In one of the big department stores June was taken up to the managers of the French salon; then Tommy went away, and presently June, whose face and figure, carriage and manner had been firmly inspected and approved, was being introduced to the manager of the French salon.

A sleepy looking colored maid came in, and some girls brought in gowns shrouded in white bags.

"The canary, Ma'am," ordered the manageress, poking her head between the curtains, and the sleepy colored maid slowly took down the bag containing the canary evening frock.

"What is your first name, child?" "June," answered that young lady. "Your name here will be Therese," added the manageress. "You haven't done this before, have you?"

"No," June's voice was faint and weak. She had a queer feeling in her stomach, and her eyes began to widen again as she studied an appalling array of cosmetics.

"Never mind. I'll be in and make you up."

At last June was to know how it felt to earn one's own living. She had a mingled exhilaration and depression in the contemplation of that remarkable experience.

As June peered out of her dressing alcove a middle aged man and woman paused in a vigorous argument. The woman wanted money, and the man would not give it. Then June was called and came out and paraded slowly down between the two long rows of chairs. There were a hundred or more women and some men. Occasionally one of the women beckoned to her and made her turn and walk away and come back.

She had displayed perhaps half a dozen gowns when the middle aged man and woman obstructed her passageway as she came out of the alcove. They were still in an energetic dispute about the money. A hundred dollars the woman wanted, and she had to have it! The man finally left her.

A lady from a group where a gray mustached man with a pink face and jovial eyes was talking and laughing and spoke to the woman. The woman listened, her eyes following June as she walked in a beautiful black velvet dinner gown. The woman spoke to a saleslady.

"I want that gown!" she snapped. "Certainly, madam," said the saleslady.

"Tell her to take it off now," ordered the customer. "It's a charge account."

So June was unceremoniously rushed into her alcove and divested of the black velvet gown, while the charge account went up. The gown was taken away. The woman had a girl carry it to the credit department, said she had bought the gown, didn't care for it and wanted the money, $135.

The manager of the credit department expostulated with the woman as far as diplomacy would permit. It was not unusual to have credit customers bring back goods and demand cash, but it was unusual to have it done so quickly. However, she was a good customer, and her bills were always paid.

The woman rejoined her friend in front of June's dressing alcove and triumphantly displayed the money. The husband of the customer came up, furious. He had been to the credit desk and discovered the deception. A little group quickly formed around the middle aged husband and wife.

It was at this moment that Blye appeared by the side of the gray mustached man, and with him was Tommy Thomas! Blye nodded his head to Cunningham and said something to Tommy. She strolled with an evident reluctance across the floor.

"Your turn, dear," said the manageress to June and frowned in the direction of the group.

"I give you everything you want," charged the man, the woman in this town has more. You can go into any shop in New York and order what you like, and I pay your bills. Yet you graft on me!"

"You give me everything but money," shrieked the woman. "I beg for every cent I get!"

To give on the one hand and to beg on the other! It was a striking illustration of the principle which had led June away from Ned. That the woman is and man is, depend upon the charity, depend upon the bounty of the man whom she marries! No matter how generous the man might be nor how penurious, the principle was the same.

The gray mustached man called the manageress.

"I would like to see that little white dress," he said, indicating June, who had on another frock.

"Certainly," replied the manageress. She hurried over to June and said, "Come, Therese."

A warm hand caught June's wrist, and a voice said:

"You're stunning! What's the fight about?"

Tommy Thomas it was. The two girls stood listening. The gray mustached man rose.

"If this is the sort of attention I receive in this shop I will give it no more of patronage," he declared ungraciously to the manageress.

Blye, smiling, saw the superintendent enter and called his attention to the gray mustached man, and the superintendent hurried over and met Orin Cunningham, whose cheeks puffed with anger.

By special arrangement for this paper a photo-drama corresponding to the installments of "Runaway June" may now be seen at the leading moving picture theaters. By arrangement made with the Mutual Film Corporation it is not only possible to read "Runaway June" each week, but also afterward to see moving pictures illustrating our story.

Tommy Was Not Highly Pleased.

June, busy with her own thoughts, presently found the dark eyes of Marie fixed steadily on her in the glass. She missed Marie's red gums, which were always showing, but there was no smile in the French Canadian girl just now.

"Why did you leave him?" asked the maid.

"Money, Marie. Ned gave me some money."

"We were all so glad that Mr. Ned was going to be so good to you," Marie pathetically observed, "and you ran away from him because he was. You should go back. My sister's husband beats her."

June had a new problem to confront now. She must earn a living, and it was a subject which she had never considered except in the vague haze of romance. When Marie returned with the paper she studied the want ads with curious interest.

Meanwhile Blye and Orin Cunningham drove to the house where Blye had first directed June.

"Send Tommy down," directed Blye, peering the door thoughtfully.

Scatt, storing many things in his mind, turned his swarthy face toward the window and presently saw Tommy come into the room, the vivacious brunette girl whom June had seen. Scatt and Cunningham rose and the three conversed earnestly. Blye showed Tommy the picture in the lid of the little gold watch. Tommy was not highly pleased from the very beginning. The men grew stern, and then Scatt saw them reduce her to submission. She walked away and presently came back wearing an evening wrap of creamy colors. The three hurried out and got into the car. They drove down into the dingy east side street where June lay in the sleep of blessed rest. Blye had Tommy take careful note of the house.

CHAPTER IV.

JUNE bustled quite cheerfully about her toilet the next morning and chose a little dark gray suit as being the least conspicuous, for now she was to be a working girl.

What is the matter?" asked the superintendent. "Matter?" blazed Cunningham. "I've been asking this saleswoman for half an hour to let me see that little white dress," he pointed to June, "and I am ignored, sir!"

The superintendent turned to the manageress. "Madam Effing, what is the trouble?"

"It's a new model," explained the manageress. "I can't get her to pay any attention to me."

"Then discharge her at once!" ordered the superintendent and turned on his heel.

Madam Effing stalked straight over to June.

"You are discharged," she snapped. "Oh!" June was stunned.

"No excuses, please!" grated the manageress.

"Are you sure my husband and that girl haven't left the city?" she asked. "They didn't go from any regular railroad station," stated Bill Wolf, with conviction.

Ned Warner at about the same time received a report of similar discouragement from the long, lean, lanky detective. There had been found no trace of June Warner nor of Blye.

VOWS and VALENTINES

"GOOD morning," said the floorwalker, leaning over the counter in order to be better able to talk to the girl behind it. "How do you feel on this lovers' day, eh?"

She looked up with a start, and hastily hid her hands behind her. "My, how you startled me! Why, I feel all right."

"What's that you've got behind you?" the floorwalker interrupted.

"That? Oh, that's nothing. Just an exchange slip to be signed," she replied glibly, bringing her right hand forward as proof of her assertion.

"Let me see the other hand," suggested the floorwalker.

"Won't one hand do?" she parried.

"Let's See the Other Hand."

"No, must see them both," he said firmly.

"Well, there, then," and she thrust forward an empty hand.

"You dropped something behind you," cried the floorwalker, triumphantly.

"You have too many eyes," she pouted, stooping to pick up what she had dropped. It proved to be a valentine, and the floorwalker snickered.

"Jove! I thought that by the time a girl got to be twenty plus she was over that kind of foolishness."

"A girl is never too old to enjoy being made love to," she retorted, "and, in fact, the older she gets the more she likes it."

"Regardless of who does the love-making, I suppose?"

"Oh, no, she has her preferences, of course, and after awhile, perhaps, she comes to have a preference—"

She paused and glanced at the floorwalker, but he was absorbed in the valentine. And she always enjoys a well-put compliment—

"Always? Now, I have known girls to snap you off, and tell you not to be silly, and to declare that they hated 'soft fellows.'"

"That's because you didn't pay your compliment at the right time, at the psychological moment, so to speak," she replied. "You probably told them how pretty they looked when they were rigged out in their oldest clothes, preparatory to doing some housecleaning. Now, you should never try to jolly a girl unless she can really flatter herself that there may be some truth in what you say, after all. Never miss an opportunity like the first wearing of a new dress to tell her what a charmer she is, and don't let the occasion slip by on which she wears that favorite pink waist or others. In other words, catch her in the mood."

"I thought you just said that a girl always liked to be made love to," the floorwalker objected.

She withered him with a glance. "But she has other things to think of, once in awhile, silly, except being made love to. Once a year, you know, in Lent, she gets very religious, and centers her mind on things not of the world. As you value her affec-

"All right," I exclaimed, a little nettled that he should have anticipated me even so much in the case. "But you haven't heard the latest."

"What is it?" he asked with provoking calmness.

"Taylor Dodge," I blurted out, "has the clue. Tomorrow he will track down the man!"

Kennedy fairly jumped as I repeated the news.

"How long has he known?" he demanded eagerly.

"Perhaps three or four hours," I hazarded.

Kennedy gazed at me fixedly.

"Then Taylor Dodge is dead?" he exclaimed, throwing off his acid-stained laboratory jacket, and hurrying into his street clothes.

"Impossible!" I ejaculated.

Kennedy paid no attention to the objection. "Come, Walter," he urged. "We must hurry before the trail gets cold."

There was something positively uncanny about Kennedy's assurance. I doubted—yet I feared.

It was well past the middle of the night when we pulled up in a night-hawk taxicab before the Dodge house, mounted the steps and rang the bell.

Jennings answered sleepily, but not so much so that he did not recognize me. He was about to bang the door shut when Kennedy interposed his foot.

"Where is Mr. Dodge?" asked Kennedy. "Is he all right?"

"Of course he is—in bed," replied the butler.

Then we heard a faint cry, like nothing exactly human. Or was it our heightened imaginations, under the spell of the darkness?

"Listen!" cautioned Kennedy.

We did, standing there now in the hall. Kennedy was the only one of us who was cool. Jennings' face blanched, then he turned tremblingly and went down to the library door, whence the sounds had seemed to come.

He called, but there was no answer. He turned the knob and opened the door. The Dodge library was a large room. In the center stood a big, flat-topped desk of heavy mahogany. It was brilliantly lighted.

At one end of the desk was a telephone. Taylor Dodge was lying on the floor at that end of the desk—perfectly rigid—his face distorted—a ghastly figure. A pet dog ran over, sniffed frantically at his master's legs and suddenly began to howl dismally.

Dodge was dead!

"Help!" shouted Jennings.

Others of the servants came rushing in. There was, for the moment, the greatest excitement and confusion.

Suddenly a wild figure in flying garments flitted down the stairs and into the library, dropping beside the dead man, without seeming to notice us at all.

"Father!" shrieked a woman's voice, heart-broken. "Father! Oh—my God—he—he is dead!"

It was Elaine Dodge.

With a mighty effort, the heroic girl seemed to pull herself together.

"Jennings," she cried, "call Mr. Bennett—immediately!"

From the one-sided, excited conversation of the butler over the telephone, I gathered that Bennett had been in the process of disrobing in his own apartment uptown, and would be right down.

Together, Kennedy, Elaine and myself lifted Dodge to a sofa and Elaine's aunt, Josephine, with whom she lived, appeared on the scene, trying to quiet the sobbing girl.

Kennedy and I withdrew a little way, and he looked about curiously.

"What was it?" I whispered. "Was it natural, an accident, or—or murder?"

The word seemed to stick in my throat. If it was a murder, what was the motive? Could it have been to get the evidence which Dodge had at his accustomed place at the desk when the masked criminal?

Kennedy moved over quietly and examined the body of Dodge. When he rose his face had a peculiar look.

"Terrible!" he whispered to me. "Apparently he had been working at his accustomed place at the desk when the masked criminal entered."

Upstairs Dodge, evidently uneasy in his mind about the precious Limpy Red letter, took it from the safe along with most of the other correspondence and, pressing a hidden spring in the wall, opened a secret panel and placed most of the important documents in this hiding place.

Downstairs the masked master criminal had already attached a voltmeter to the wires he had installed, waiting. Just then could be heard the tinkle of Dodge's telephone, and the old man rose to answer it. As he did so he placed his foot on the iron register, his hand taking the telephone and the receiver. At that instant came a powerful electric flash. Dodge sank on the floor, clutching the instrument, electrocuted.

A moment later the criminal slid silently into Dodge's room. Carefully putting on rubber gloves and avoiding touching the register, he wrenched the telephone from the grasp of the dead man, replacing it in its normal position. Only for a second did he pause to look at his victim as he destroyed the evidence of his work.

Minutes were precious. First Dodge's pockets, then his desk engaged his attention. There was left the safe. As he approached the strong box, the master criminal took two vials from his pocket. Removing a bust of Webster that stood on the safe, he poured the contents of the vials in two Long after I had left and even after

Bennett left, Dodge continued working in his library, for he was known as a prodigious worker.

Had he taken the trouble, however, to pause and peer out into the moonlight that flooded the back of his house, he might have seen the figures of two stealthy crooks crouching in the half shadows of one of the cellar windows, one crouched, at least, masked.

The masked crook held in his hands carefully the ends of two wires attached to an electric feed, and, sending his pal to keep watch outside, he entered the cellar of the Dodge house through a window, whose pane they had carefully removed. As he came through the window he dragged the wires with him, and, after a moment's reconnoitering, attached them to the furnace pipe of the old-fashioned hot-air heater, where the pipe ran up through the floor to the library above. The other wire was quickly attached to the telephone where its wires entered.

Without waiting a moment longer than necessary, the masked criminal advanced again and actually put his hands down through the top of the safe, pulling out a bunch of papers. Quickly he thrust them all, with just a glance, into his pocket.

Still working quickly, he took the bust of the great orator, which he had removed, and placed it under the light. Next, from his pocket he drew two curious stencils, as it were, which he had apparently carefully prepared. With his hands, still carefully gloved, he rubbed the stencils on his hair, as if to cover them with a film of natural oils. Then he deliberately pressed them over the statue in several places. It was a peculiar action, and he seemed to fairly glow over it when it was done and the bust returned to its place, covering the hole.

As noiselessly as he had come, he made his exit after one last malignant look at Dodge. It was now but the work of a moment to remove the wires he had placed and climb out of the window, taking them and destroying the evidence down in the cellar.

A low whistle from the masked crook, now again in the shadow, brought his pal stealthily to his side. "It's all right," he whispered hoarsely to the man. "Now you attend to Limpy Red."

The villainous looking pal nodded.

mixed masses of powder, forming a heap on the safe, into which he inserted two magnesium wires.

He lighted them, sprang back, hiding his eyes from the light, and a blinding gush of flame, lasting perhaps ten seconds, poured out from the top of the safe.

It was not an explosion, but just a dazzling, intense flame that sizzled and crackled. It seemed impossible, but the glowing mass was literally sinking, sinking down into the cold steel. At last it burned through—as if the safe had been of tinder!

Without waiting a moment longer than necessary, the masked criminal advanced again and actually put his hands down through the top of the safe, pulling out a bunch of papers. Quickly he thrust them all, with just a glance, into his pocket.

and, without another word, the two made their getaway, safely, in opposite directions.

When Limpy Red, still trembling, left the office of Dodge earlier in the evening, he had repaired as fast as his shambling feet would take him to his favorite dive up on Park Row.

Had the Bowers "slinkers" not got into his eyes he might have noticed among the late revelers a man who spoke to no one, but took his place near by at the bar.

Limpy had long since reached the point of saturation and lurching forth from his new found cronies he sought other fields of excitement. Likewise did the newcomer, who bore a strange resemblance to the lookout who had been stationed outside at the Dodge house a scant half hour before.

What happened later was only a matter of seconds—and waiting until the hated snitch—for gangdom hates the informer worse than anything else dead or alive—had turned a sufficient dark and deserted corner.

A muffled thud, a stifled groan followed as a heavy section of lead pipe wrapped in a newspaper descended on the crass skull of Limpy.

It was the vengeance of the Clutching Hand—swift, sure, remorseless. And yet it had not been a night of complete success for the master criminal, as anyone might have seen who could have followed his sinuous route to a place of greater safety. Unable to walk longer, he pulled the papers he had taken from the safe from his pocket. His chagrin at finding most of them to be blank found only one expression of felled fury—that menacing clutching hand—the real one!

Kennedy had turned from his futile examination for marks on the telephone. There stood the safe, a moderate sized strong box, but of a modern type. He tried the door. It was locked. There was not a mark on it. The combination had not been tampered with. Nor had there been any attempt to "saw" the added Kennedy.

With a quick motion he felt in his pocket as if looking for gloves. Finding none, he glanced about and seized two pieces of paper from the desk. With them, in order not to confuse any possible finger prints on the bust, he lifted it off.

I gave a gasp of surprise. There, in the top of the safe, yawned a gaping hole, through which one could have thrust his arm!

"What is it?" we asked, crowding about him.

"Thermitt," he replied laconically. "Thermitt?" I repeated.

"Yes—a compound of iron oxide and powdered aluminum, invented by a chemist at Essen, Germany. It gives a temperature of over five thousand degrees. It will eat its way through the strongest steel."

Jennings, his mouth wide open with wonder, advanced to take the bust from Kennedy.

"No—don't touch it," he waved him off, laying the bust on the desk. "I want no one to touch it—don't you see how careful I was to use the paper, that there might be no question about any clue this fellow may have left on the marble?"

As he spoke, Craig was dusting over the surface of the bust with some black powder.

"Look!" exclaimed Craig suddenly. "Finger prints!" I cried excitedly.

"Yes," nodded Kennedy, studying them closely. "A clue—perhaps."

"What—those little marks—a clue?" asked a voice behind us.

Exploits of Elaine

I turned and saw Elaine looking over our shoulders, fascinated. It was evidently the first time she had realized that Kennedy was in the room.

"How can you tell anything by that?" she asked.

"Why, easily," he answered, picking up a glass paper weight which lay on the desk. "You see, I place my finger on this weight—so. You could see it even without the powder on this glass. Do you see those lines? There are various types of markings—four general types—and each person's markings are different, even if of the same general type—loop, whorl, arch or composite."

He continued working as he talked. "Your thumb marks, for example, Miss Dodge, are different from mine. Mr. Jameson's are different from both of us. And this fellow's finger prints are still different. It is mathematically impossible to find two alike in every respect."

Kennedy was holding the paper weight near the bust as he talked. I shall never forget the look of blank amazement on his face as he bent over closer.

"My God!" he exclaimed excitedly, "this fellow is a master criminal! He has made stencils or something of the sort on which, by some mechanical process, he has actually forged the hitherto infallible finger prints!"

I, too, bent over and studied the marks on the bust and those Kennedy had made on the paper weight to show Elaine.

THE FINGER PRINTS ON THE BUST WERE KENNEDY'S OWN.

Farmers' Big Rally.

Dr. Fred Mutchler, of State University, president of the Kentucky Farmers Union, will speak at the Court House in Richmond, Saturday afternoon, Feb. 13, at 1:30 o'clock, on topics of vital interest to every landlord and tenant in Madison county.

Dr. Mutchler is without doubt the best informed man in Kentucky on farming, farm conditions and farm possibilities in this State. For years he has owned and operated a farm in Western Kentucky and has been a highly paid official of the Government Agricultural Department. His farm extension work in the last three or four years has done more to advance agriculture in Kentucky than any one thing this State has had the benefit of in a generation. He knows your soil and what it will produce better than you do. Hear what he has to say about it.

All over the State farmers are organizing and discussing control and better prices for tobacco and other farm products. This meeting will mark the beginning of the forward movement in the county of Madison. Be there—Saturday afternoon, Feb. 13, at 1:30 p. m.

What the Farmers' Union can do for the farmer Dr. Mutchler will explain to you at the following places:

Richmond Saturday, Feb. 13, at 1:30.

Cottontown, Monday night, Feb. 15, at 7:30 p. m.

Rheumatism In Joints

Pain Disappears and Swelling Vanishes in a Few Days.

That is what happens if you use Rheuma, the wonderful remedy that B. L. Middleton and all druggists sell on the "money back if not cured" plan. There is a vast amount of rheumatism in this vicinity, and if you know any sufferer, call his attention to this generous offer. Rheuma is a quick-acting prescription. You will know your rheumatism is leaving 24 hours after you take the first dose. It dissolves the uric acid and drives it from its lodging place.

Mrs. Alice A. Brown, Ithaca, N. Y., writes: "For seven years I suffered greatly with rheumatism in my hip; at night I was scarcely able to sleep. One bottle of Rheuma cured me."

That sounds miraculous, but Rheuma does miraculous things. Fifty cents a bottle of B. L. Middleton, and all druggists—Adv. feb. 3-10

GREAT MAN'S DEATH

Country He Served So Well Remembers Lincoln's Work With Gratitude.

AT TWENTY minutes past ten o'clock Friday evening, April 14, 1865, Abraham Lincoln was shot by John Wilkes Booth in the back of the head behind the left ear and mortally injured. At 22 minutes past seven o'clock the next morning, Saturday, April 15, 1865, he died.

There have been many and vast changes since that fateful day, and the prayer which Lincoln prayed that the country might be one again has been answered in a way that would have rejoiced his great heart. Not an anniversary of his birth and death has passed since his cruel taking off on which some tribute has not been paid to his memory, and so it will be to the end of time among generous Americans, wherever their residence or inherited sentiments; for, however he may have been misjudged in the confusion and stress of antagonistic opinion, there is none now who does not praise him for his courage and his faithfulness to his honest convictions.

He was born in Kentucky February 12, 1809, and died in Washington April 15, 1865, in his fifty-seventh year at the very zenith of his powers. The books are full of the story of his life and work, but there are still many interesting facts connected with him that have not yet been noted, notwithstanding the industry of those who have collected great masses of everything they could find in any way connected with his life and death.

Mr. Lincoln, as everyone knows, was shot by Booth while he was attending a theatrical performance at Ford's theater in Washington. "Our American Cousin" held the boards that night and Laura Keane was playing the part of Florence Trenchard for the last time. She had already performed the same part for a thousand nights. Fifty years before she had played the role at McVicker's theater in Chicago the night of the day on which Mr. Lincoln was nominated for president by the Republican convention, in May, 1860, and all unconscious of the terrible tragedy, she played with uncommon cleverness, and while yet the theater was ringing with laughter and applause, came the crack of the pistol shot from the president's box that plunged the country into mourning.

After Mr. Lincoln had been shot he was removed across the street from the theater to the residence of William Petersen, a highly respected merchant tailor, who lived directly opposite the playhouse, at 516 Tenth street. This house is still standing, as is also the old Ford theater, and both are now owned by the government. There have been few changes in the Petersen house.

For 40 years Osborn H. Oldroyd has been devoting himself to the assembling together of an invaluable collection, in which are included more than three thousand relics, which constitute, as Elizabeth Porter Gould has said, "one of the most interesting and valuable ever collected in behalf of a human being." The collection contains 250 funeral sermons, about seventy pieces of music, a thousand volumes relating to Lincoln, 300 portraits, busts and medals, photographs of Booth, pictures of the assassin, the family cradle in which the Lincoln children were rocked, an original black locust rail split by the young man, then never dreaming of the place he was to fill in the history of the world; the family Bible from which Lincoln's mother read to him when he was a boy, and literally thousands of other things in some sort associated with the murdered president.

"The First American."

As Lowell said of him, Lincoln was the first American. Whitman calls him "the sweetest, wisest soul of all my days and lands. And today he, the leader in a great Civil war, is loved and revered by the South as by the North. Some of the noblest tributes ever paid to him have been those paid by the Southerners. He belongs to the whole nation, and he is the only man since Washington of whom that can be said.

CATARRH OF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

Peruna Saved Me

Mrs. Powers, whose address is given below her portrait, is an ardent friend of Peruna. She says:

"I am thankful to tell you that my old trouble has never bothered me any since you received my testimonial. Any one wishing to know the facts in my case, if I suffered with a severe catarrh of the bladder, which caused continued irritation and pain. I was miserable and could not stand up or walk for any length of time without extreme weariness and pain. I began taking Peruna and it greatly relieved me and in eleven weeks I was completely cured, and felt like a new man."

Those who object to liquid medicine can now procure Peruna in Tablet form.

Catarrh of the Internal Organs

Mrs. A. T. Powers, R. R. 7, Box 121, London, Ohio, writes: "I write to thank you for the wonderful good your Peruna has done for me. I was a sufferer from kidney and bladder trouble for twenty-two years. Two years ago I began to take Peruna, and I only took about three bottles and today I can say I am a well person."

Catarrh is liable to affect any of the internal organs. It is especially true of the bladder, which is very frequently the seat of catarrh. This is sometimes called cystitis.

Always The Best.

M. M. Hamilton, who always has the best in the beef line, authorizes us to say to the people of this city that he has purchased some of the finest beef cattle to be found in the country—regular export beefs, which he is slaughtering for his exclusive trade. His large experience enables him to know "what is what" in cattle and he knows when and how to buy.

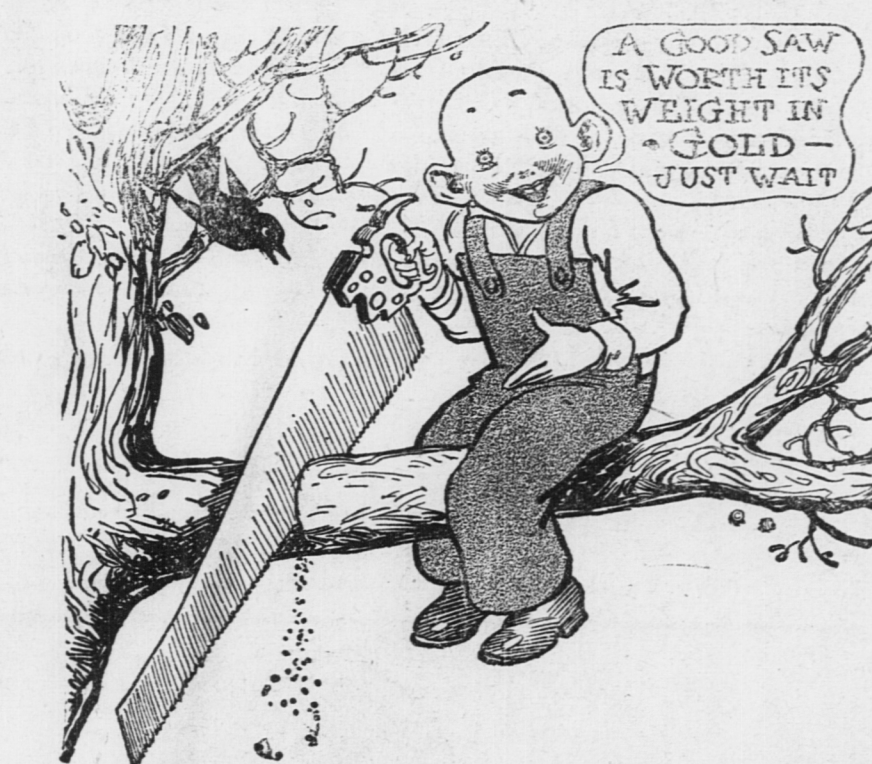

A heavy cold in the lungs that was expected to cure itself has been the starting point in many cases of disease that ended fatally. The sensible course is to take frequent doses of BALLARD'S HOREHOUND SYRUP. It checks the progress of the disorder and assists nature to restore normal conditions. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Madison Drug Co.—Adv. feb.

Recognized Advantages.

You will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has recognized advantages over most medicines in use for coughs and colds. It does not suppress a cough, but loosens and relieves it. It aids expectoration and opens the secretions, which enables the system to throw off a cold. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia. It contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by all dealers—Adv. feb.

MUCH ENTHUSIASM IS NOW AROUSED.

Cooper, "Tanlac Man," Gets Big Reception in Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 9.—Hundreds are now calling almost daily to meet L. T. Cooper, the noted visitor, and to find out just how his famous medicine, Tanlac, is sold, how it is prepared and what the preparation actually looks like.

In commenting upon the rush to meet Mr. Cooper and obtain his celebrated medicine, the manager of the Taylor-Traas-store said:

"The success of the opening of the introductory sale of Tanlac exceeded our expectations. We have been agreeably surprised by the knowledge the public seems to have of the preparation. While many came just to meet Mr. Cooper and see what the medicine really looked like, equally as many came prepared to obtain the preparation. These people simply asked for Tanlac, and the facility with which the medicine was distributed throughout the day proved somewhat of a revelation to many of our older men."

Mr. Cooper said: "I am, indeed, gratified to see such marked enthusiasm, and I feel justified in predicting that Tanlac will prove just as successful in Louisville as it has in the larger cities. I do not believe that I am overestimating the success of the medicine when I state that I am confident that from three to five thousand people will call and get Tanlac this week."

Mr. Cooper was asked about the charitable work he intended to perform in Louisville. He replied: "Yes, it is true that I have written the Associated Charities asking that organization to furnish me, as soon as practicable, with the names and addresses of at least fifty of the most deserving poor families of your city, whom I propose to help. I have also written St. Joseph's Orphan Home, offering certain contributions. I shall communicate with similar institutions within a few days with the view of endorsing their noble efforts by assisting them in some substantial way."

"In conformity with my usual custom of encouraging the hospitals, I will make special concessions with reference to supplying such institutions of your city with Tanlac, as I consider the preparation a superior tonic in all cases of convalescence."

The famous medicine, Tanlac, can now be bought in Richmond only at H. L. Perry's drug store.

LOCAL ITEMS.
David McCord and Miss Nannie Hayden, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Thorpe, went to New Albany, Ind., last week and were married. The groom is 23 years old and the bride only 16. Both are members of some of Madison's best families. The married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Thorpe, who accompanied them, eloped last fall to the same Greta Green and were married. Mrs. Thorpe is a sister of David McCord, who is the gentleman who protested so vigorously when she went away. It must be "catching." We wish the young couple much joy and a long life together.

Dr. Ira Brown Oldham, of Speedwell, this county, was married to Miss Mary Newland, daughter of Rev. Christopher Newland, a prominent Baptist minister of near Stanford, on the evening of Jan. 30th, at the residence of the bride's father.

Caldwell Public School opens in the new building next Monday. Hons. C. F. Burnam and W. B. Smith will deliver short addresses as well as City Attorney P. H. Sullivan. The Richmond Silver Band will be in attendance to discourse music at proper intervals.

The stockholders of the Estill County Deposit Bank have decided not to resume business. The receivers have had the sale and other furniture removed and re-leased the building. Cashier McDowell in the meantime continues silent and his whereabouts are still a matter of uncertainty to the bank officials, although it has been reported that he is somewhere in Mexico.

CAUSE FOR ALARM

Catarrh a Danger Sign. Hyomei The Remedy—Guaranteed By B. L. Middleton.

There is no more annoying, likewise serious ailment than catarrh, which is indicated by sniffling, raising of mucus and frequent colds. If it is not cured it will surely affect the lining of the air passages, and frequently destroys the hearing.

Hyomei is the effective and reliable remedy for all catarrhal affections—you breathe it, using a small inhaler that comes with every complete outfit. The antiseptic medication of Hyomei simply has to reach all the sore, raw and inflamed surfaces of the air passages. Its healing begins at once—you feel better after the first treatment—even almost hopeless cases respond quickly.

Hyomei is inexpensive, and surely gives quick and permanent benefit. B. L. Middleton sells it on the "No-cure-no-pay" plan. You certainly can afford to try this harmless remedy when there is nothing to pay if not benefited.—Adv., Feb. 3-10.

ENDORSED AT HOME

Such Proof As This Should Convince Any Richmond Citizen.

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can be had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow-citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so. Telling one's experience when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Richmond adds one more to the many cases of Home Endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

Mrs. Pearl Boen, 109 Hallie Irvine street, Richmond, Ky., says: "My back ached and my kidneys were disordered. At times I was nervous and didn't sleep well. I felt little like getting about, in fact, I was miserable in every way until I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Middleton's Drug Store. I began to feel fine immediately after I commenced taking them and their continued use made me better in every way."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, it is like a rubber band closed by inflammation, and the sound vibrations are intercepted. It is entirely closed, and the hearing is lost. Unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give the Hundred Dollar reward for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free. J. C. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, Etc. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation. Adv.
